

Apply for European Ethics Bowl 2023

Topic for 2023: Ethics in Sports.

How do you feel about that huge sums of money are spent on the infrastructure of the World Cup and other sporting events, while at the same time cuts are being made in other important areas, such as health and education services, as thousands of people may die to build the infrastructure needed for these events? Should we as individuals watch, cheer, and ignore the obvious moral issues or abstain and protest the organisation of such events?

Have you ever wondered how you can add your voice to such ethical challenges and also travel to other European countries to share your views with students on these issues? If your answer is yes then the European Ethics Bowl international debate competition is for you.

All Hungarian and International bachelor and master students from the Faculty of Economics and Business Administration at the University of Szeged are invited to participate in the national European Ethics Bowl competition.

Entry into the competition is free of charge and is open to all GTK students that are fluent in English and are interested in debating ethical issues with other students within and outside Hungary.

The winning team will be selected to represent Hungary in the international debate competitions in Ljubljana (Slovenia) with students from other European universities. All expenses for participation will be covered by the organisers.

Each team consist of three (3) members who can be either undergraduate or post-graduate students from the same or different study programs or mixed together. Individuals who do not have a full team of 3 students may still apply and would be considered if there are enough individuals to make up a complete team and they are willing to work together.

To participate in the European Ethics Bowl 2023, you should register your team on this form link until 3rd March, 23:59. You will be contacted afterwards with more information.

We provide preparatory workshops in March for interested students.
